David's Box of Treasures Margaret Grace

This story is about development of skills through play and sensory processing with toys, movement, auditory and external stimuli. David is a four-year-old boy who uses his imagination and toys to open up his world of play as every child does. The reader will be captured by memories of childhood and the magic of play as they read through the story and may be enticed to even pick up a toy and start playing themselves! Big or small, a well-treasured toy brings back lingering moments of childhood and how play is fundamental to growth.
