Are you teachable? What does it mean to be teachable? Are there barriers that keep you and me from being teachable? Are there practices we can employ to enhance our ability to be teachable? Why do some leaders seem to be less teachable than others, when in fact it is an essential skill for success as a leader? Cal Habig relates parts of his own journey towards becoming more teachable. He addresses these questions and more from both a Biblical perspective as well as with a view towards practical application. With transparency and insight the author helps us each look at our own struggles with being teachable. Questions are included at the end of each chapter to help the reader truly open the doors towards new possibilities and greater success.
